4. Burmese cabinet reportedly seriously split:

25X1

The Burmese cabinet has split into two factions, one led by
Premier Nu and Minister of Industry Kyaw
Nyein, the other by Defense Minister Ba Swe and Home Minister Khin Maung Gale.

Comment: The Burmese cabinet outwardly has given every indication of working in harmony, and many of its members, including Ba Swe and Khin Maung Gale, have repeatedly denounced the Communists.

Rivalry between Ba Swe and Kyaw Nyein, who represent the left and right wings respectively of the powerful Socialist Party, has often been reported, however, and the development of such a division would seriously hamper the government's efforts to restore internal stability.

NEAR EAST - AFRICA

25X1A 5. Election rivalry reportedly widens split between shah and Zahedi:

The shah's inability to reach agreement with Prime Minister Zahedi on election candidates has brought the latter to the verge of resignation,

In several districts the shah is backing one candidate and Zahedi another; trouble is expected when balloting begins in these areas.

The voting so far has been carried on in constituencies where there has been no dispute and is being postponed as long as possible in trouble areas. Tehran reportedly is last on the voting list.

Comment: While increasing tension between the shah and Zahedi can be expected as the elections move into the disputed areas, the prime minister would probably resign only under the most extreme provocation.

25X1A 7. Iraq would consider pact with Turkey or Pakistan:

In a conversation with Ambassador Berry in Baghdad, Prime Minister Jamali suggested that he would study sympathetically any proposals for a military pact which would link Iraq with Turkey or Pakistan.

25X1A

Jamali said he hopes to open a pro-Western campaign just as soon as he has assurances of American military assistance to present to the people as a concrete gesture of Western friendship.

Comment: Jamali's interest in a pact, while apparently sincere, seems immediately stimulated by his desire to use the prospect of American military aid to bolster his political position. He may study proposals for a pact, but does not seem able at this time to challenge the popular opposition to any Western-sponsored military pact.

25X1A 8. London discounts latest Egyptian proposal on Suez:

An official of the British Foreign Office has told Ambassador Aldrich that he does not consider as "very helpful" the latest Egyptian proposal for availability of the Suez base.

The Egyptian formula would provide for immediate availability of the base to the West in the event of an attack on Turkey as well as on any Arab state. Britain, the official stated, is primarily interested in the availability of the base in the event of a global war and not in terms of an attack on individual countries.

Comment: London's reaction to this proposal is likely to strengthen Egypt's suspicions of Britain's sincerity and desire for an agreement at this time.

25X1A 10. Tito regime believed strengthened by Djilas case:

Ambassador Riddleberger reports that most foreign observers in Belgrade believe the purge of Djilas has strengthened the Tito government by restoring the confidence of the lower party hierarchy, which Djilas' views had previously begun to shake.

The ambassador also reports that Yugoslav officials fear that the repudiation of Djilas will be interpreted as a gesture toward reconciliation with the Soviet Union. Foreign Office officials have taken pains to assure American embassy officials that the Djilas affair was a purely internal matter.

Comment: Although a purge is already under way and can be expected to spread throughout Yugoslavia, it will probably touch few if any Communists in positions of power.

WESTERN EUROPE

11. French official reiterates French reservations on negotiations with Viet Minh:

25X1A

According to the American consulate in Hanoi, French secretary for the Associated States Jacquet has assured a Vietnamese official that the Laniel government has no intention of attempting negotiations with the Viet Minh. He added that not even the Socialist members of the French National Assembly would agree to any arrangement which would turn Vietnam inevitably over to Communist rule.

25X1A

Comment: While supporters of negotiations with the Viet Minh probably count on Socialist backing, recent cabinet debates indicate strong rightist sentiment for other steps toward withdrawal.

Since last November, when Ho Chi Minh's offer to negotiate was first printed in a Swedish paper, the Laniel government has maintained that it will not engage in negotiations that might lead to Communist domination of the Vietnamese.

12. Italian cabinet crisis may be prolonged:

A prolonged government crisis now appears in prospect in Italy, since both the Monarchists and the Democratic Socialists have announced their intention to vote against Premier-designate Fanfani.

Any new Christian Democratic premier-designate will be forced to make a clear choice between Monarchist and Democratic Socialist support. At present a government headed by a right-wing Christian Democrat such as Pella or former vice premier Piccioni would seem to have the best chance of winning parliamentary approval. Pella in particular would have the support of rightist nationalist elements who are demanding increased Italian independence from American influence. Other possible premiers-designate include former interior minister Scelba, Senate president Merzagora, or Chamber of Deputies president Gronchi. The last might even be willing to make overtures to the Nenni Socialists.

In any event, it is unlikely that any Italian government can afford to identify itself as closely with American policies as in the past.
